First Varriuer scholarship presented during AAS degree program kickoff

The Gallaudet community recently celebrated the initiation of the new associate of applied science (AAS) degree program at Northwest Campus with a banquet at the Walter Reed Army Hospital Officers Club.

In his keynote speech, Michael Moore, assistant professor of chemistry, challenged the AAS class of 1988 to be role models for others. Dr. Moore wrote the original proposal for establishing the School of Preparatory Studies' AAS program and was involved in its development.

A highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Tania Varriuer Reese scholarship to Jennifer Baigent, a member of the first Office Systems Program (OSP) class. The scholarship, presented by Charles Pearce, chair of the department of Business Administration, was donated by William Varriuer, director of the School of Management Project, in memory of his daughter.

The banquet also celebrated the opening of a state-of-the-art OSP laboratory at Northwest Campus, which consists of a workroom and a high technology office area. The lab will be used to develop and assess student skills in a simulated office setting and to prepare students for summer internships in offices throughout the metropolitan area.

'Kendall Kids' exhibit shows wider range of skills as art program grows

With the "Kendall Kids" art, photography and video exhibit now on display in the Merrill Learning Center, Philip Bogdan, head of the KDES Art Department, said he hopes that more campus community members will become aware of KDES students' artistic talents and the potential for developing them.

The show, which opened March 12, is on view in the lower level exhibit area of the Learning Center through March 27.

"Our whole KDES art program has been exciting this year," said Bogdan. "But recent grants from the Polaroid, Colorfax and Sony corporations enabled students to explore a wider range of mediums, and the program grew from average to remarkable. The students developed not only sophisticated art skills but also the necessary confidence to use them."

"Having successfully mastered the complexities of creating aesthetically handsome still photos, the students have assimilated well to video," Bogdan said. "They are now learning skills such as camera work, lighting techniques, script writing, directing, acting and set design," he said.

A Kendall Gallery, which will be run by the students, is currently in the planning stage.

The Capitol Children's Museum plans to feature KDES students' art in an exhibit entitled "My Eyes Have Ears," Bogdan said. "This exhibit will then become part of an art exchange with the People's Republic of China."

"We are using a donation box in the exhibit area, and any support the community can provide will be greatly appreciated," he said.

Gallaudet, University of Hawaii reach tentative plan for Center on Deafness

A tentative agreement has been reached with the University of Hawaii to establish a Gallaudet University Center on Deafness in Honolulu. The agreement caps nearly 18 months of negotiations between officials of the two universities.

At the request of President Jerry C. Lee, James Fernandes, chair of the Communications Arts Department, has accepted the responsibility of getting the center up and running.

Dr. Fernandes, a native of Hawaii, plans to be based in Honolulu from late this summer until early 1988, when a permanent center coordinator is expected to be on the job. He anticipates an official opening ceremony for the center in October or November.

One of the expected guests at the opening ceremony, schedule permitting, is Sen. Daniel K. Inouye (D-Hawaii). In a mid-March meeting with Dr. Lee, the senator expressed his pleasure with Gallaudet's efforts to establish the center in Hawaii.

"He's very aware of the high incidence of deafness on the islands," Dr. Lee said of Sen. Inouye. "We're pleased to have his support."

The cooperative agreement to found the center was formalized during a late February visit to Hawaii by Dr. Lee, Dr. Fernandes and Provost Catherine Ingold.

Based on a detailed assessment of the needs of the approximately 60,000 hearing impaired residents of Hawaii, the primary goals of the center are (1) to provide an introduction to deafness and orientation to communication to at least 1,000 public and private sector service providers, and (2) to offer specialized workshops for deaf youth.

and adults in a variety of life skills including assertiveness, career development, parenting and political involvement.

Other goals for the center include developing curricula and courses to enhance the capability of selected human service workers to assist hearing impaired persons, and conducting workshops to assist instructors in modifying curricula to meet the needs of hearing impaired students.

Francine Wai Lee, executive secretary of the Hawaii Commission on the Handicapped, chaired the committee of Hawaiians that assessed the need for the new center and invited Gallaudet's participation. The proposed center "represents a milestone in the delivery of services to hearing impaired persons in Hawaii and the Pacific Basin," she said.

President Lee shared Ms. Lee's enthusiasm, adding that the new center is "an important step in meeting the outreach goals set forth in the University's Master Plan."

According to Dr. Ingold, the need for the Center on Deafness in Hawaii "was very clear based on research in the past year. I anticipate that the center will encourage other important research in the years ahead."

A decision is expected soon concerning which campus of the extensive University of Hawaii system will house the center.

Dr. Lee explained that accountability for the Hawaii center will be in the President's Office, unlike the five Gallaudet University Regional Centers (College for Continuing Education) or the new center in Puerto Rico (International Center on Deafness).

Poole sets 2 new swimming records

Sophomore Michelle Poole set new records for both the Chesapeake Women's Athletic Conference (CWAC) and Gallaudet during the 4th Annual CWAC Swimming/ Diving Championships at the end of February with a time of 1:01.11 in the 100-yard butterfly.

Her performance qualified her—for the second year—for the Division III National Collegiate Athletic Association Swimming/Diving Championships March 12-14 in Canton, Ohio.

Poole and four other Gallaudet swimmers—Aimee Chappelow, Lori Ann Huff, Tracy Leinster and Christina Nymo—placed in the top 12 in various events during the CWAC championships.

After a disappointing season first semester, the Gallaudet women's swim team returned in January with renewed motivation and effort. "The overall record of 4-12 belies the close competition and outstanding performances that occurred in the meets," said Coach Carol Ann Smalley. "With primarily freshwomen and sophomores on the squad, we are looking forward to continuing skill development and improving the win-loss record in the future."

Governor's Advisory Commission to meet

The Maryland Governor's Advisory Commission on the Hearing Impaired will hold its fourth regional meeting March 28 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Humanities Building, Room 18, Montgomery Community College.

The commission, chaired by Sheila Conlon Mentkowski, staff attorney in the National Center for Law and the Deaf, will discuss issues concerning senior citizens, women and minorities, regional matters, state services to deaf and deaf-blind people, transition from school to work and employment.

Campus community members are encouraged to come and share their experiences. Such experiences will become part of the commission's September report to Maryland Governor William Schaeffer.

Sign language interpreters and an audio loop will be available. Anyone needing an oral interpreter or an interpreter for deaf-blind persons should call Joanne Weiner, 897-5700, at least five days in advance.
